GUI vs. Command-line Folders and Files

I am very new to any kind of coding and found some kind of challenge in GUI and Command-line. Command-line came more naturally compared to GUI. While I was able to do everything expected of us, it took some time. I think over time I'll understand it more and feel more comfortable and confident in it. To me, GUI had more stuff, making it more intimidating. However, there seemed like more area for help, and had more options of stuff to mess around with. The command-line was daunting in the sense that there wasn't much on the page making it harder to understand.
